

The Dancer's Song - Chris Rogan arr. Chris Rogan

Chorus:

One after another his steps would not fail
One after another the dancer would dance and the tunes they would play.

Verses:

If ever a man would never stand easy this man had rhythm run deep through his veins.
If ever the music would rise to the threshold the music would gently call out his name.

His eyes would be bright - his feet they would glide as weightless they carried him over the floor.
On toes he would twirl and to heel he would step and if anyone asked he had one dance just more.

Age now upon him no more to the floor, but his heart still dances long into the night.
His memories surround him and carry him on but it's only in dreams he dances so light.

and.... The Donegal Reel